

GabbarIsBack is a movie released in 2015, based on the popular Indian action comedy film, Sholay. It has received mixed reviews from critics and was declared to be 'the best Indian film of all time'. In this article, we will address the "GabbarIsBack" torrent file controversy. We will examine what happens when copyrighted material becomes available for download on a P2P network and also discuss the legality of downloading copyrighted material without permission. Finally, we'll talk about how companies handle copyright violations online. The GabbarIsBackmovie was released on YouTube in the year 2013, but was taken down due to copyright issues. The problem started when a user uploaded the entire "GabbarIsBack" movie to an online file sharing system called 'The Pirate Bay'. Torrentfreeproxy enables users to download copyrighted material without permission. Since the original movie wasn't available anywhere else, people kept downloading it from The Pirate Bay. Although it's not clear who uploaded the GabbarIsBack torrent, many have blamed "the guy who uploaded it" for uploading it in the first place. This started a huge debate online about what you can or can't download. The film's producers asked the High Court to make The Pirate Bay remove the GabbarIsBack torrent from its website. The court agreed, but by then it was too late. By this time, thousands of users had already downloaded the movie illegally through the torrent system. It's estimated that between 100,000 and 700,000 people downloaded it illegally before it was taken down. The film's producers then went after these downloaders by sending out copyright infringement notices to them without permission of the courts. While this is a typical complaints process, The Pirate Bay pulled the movie from its website. According to TorrentFreeproxy: it's not possible to remove a torrent once it has been shared and started to download by the public'. This led to a second set of problems for The GabbarIsBackmovie producers. While it was no longer available for download, hundreds of copies leaked online through multiple other websites like "Superspeed". GabbarIsBackmovie's producers asked these sites to remove all copies of the movie, but they were also too late. Now there were thousands of illegal copies out there and people were watching them on their computers and mobile devices. The Pirate Bay has already been called a 'trusted' group to share copyrighted material online. Like many other sites, it would have been a major blow for torrent systems if they were supposed to be so bad. In the end, the film didn't suffer from the leak. It actually made over $15 million dollars in its opening week alone, making it one of the most successful Hindi films of all time. In this article, we will analyze why that was possible and also discuss whether or not this makes The Pirate Bay a good or bad thing for copyright holders and users.
